NAMNAM

'Any one who fights with guns we call Kambonse. Pubuge was succeeded by Isaka—we Dagomba were accustomed to give such Mohammedan names to our children. No European had as yet come to our country. We kept in touch with Naleregu, and our Chiefs receive the red fez from Naleregu to this day. Isaka was succeeded by Konteem (Fail-to-think). He was succeeded by Bazirene (They-do-not know that). He was succeeded by Lamsin, Dayi, Kapeon, Too, Yelazoo (Palavers-in-plenty), Zure, and Nwena. In his (Nwena's) time, the white man came; we fired at them with arrows as they passed. Nwena was succeeded by Ti (Tree); a tree was his segere. During his time, the Europeans asked him to make a road between Navaro and Bawku, but he refused. Ti was killed by his own people, because they thought he was conspiring with the Europeans. I myself, Zuru II, ran to Bawku and thence to Gambaga and came with Captain Welim (Wheeler?) and we fought and many people were killed; after which peace came.

'Our ancestors were Dagomba,[1] now we are all Namnam. We marry with Kusase, Gruse, Talense. We formerly circumcised.[2] Our ancestors had no marks, but now we tattoo like the Nankanse. I was cut at Do, near Bono. Namnam women have a special marking called ta velim (lit. fine marks), running from the nose across the cheeks and round the neck ending on the shoulders.'

Clans: 'The clan (bura) of Chiefs is the big-snake clan, Wa'tetaam (python). All the fifteen Chiefs who preceded me were of this clan. A python once showed an ancestor where to get water. The people have their own clans.'[3]

Namnam Towns under Nangode: Nangoot (where the head Chief lives), Peluno, Damologo, Tendono, Logode, Dagelega, Zanleregu, Son, Dakyigu, Mosi, Kono, Dobila, Sapare, Dasablego, Gono, Zoga, Yokote, Nyoboka.[4] Each of these towns is known as a teya.

Constitution of Namnam Teya: Each teya is divided into a number of yi zut (sing. yi zugo) sections; each section is under a yi-zu-kpwema (Elder of a section); all the sections are under one Kambon-nab appointed by the head Chief. The head Chief, an exceptionally fine

[1] He does not make any distinction between Mampruse and Dagomba.

[2] The Namnam women have the clitoris removed at the age of puberty.

[3] I, unfortunately, went down with fever and had to cut short my stay with the Namnam before I had made a record of these.

[4] Datoko, Namoo, Sakote, and Dusi are Namnam settlements, but not under the Chief of Nangode.

NAMNAM

632 622 624 and intelligent man (see Fig. 79), informed me this was the constitution long before the Europeans came. 'A Kambon-nab', he said, 'is succeeded by any one who asks for the post, but if there are many applicants, the wishes of the people of the teya were taken into consideration.'

651 622 Tribute: The head Chief stated that he received yearly tribute of corn, ground-nuts, and beans, and that friends for whom he settled cases would 'thank him with a sheep'. He also received presents from the teya heads, whose appointment lay with him.

651 622 224 'When a beast is killed in hunting, the whole beast is given to the section-head of the hunter who killed it. He, in turn, sends a hind leg to the Kambon-naba, who sends it to the Chief, who shares it with the Kambonnannam.'

624 622 793 Work of Section-heads: Ten'dan': The Territorial Ruler: 'The section-heads settled adultery cases. If blood were shed on the land or any one was killed, or if rain did not fall, a cow or sheep or goat was given by the Chief to the Ten'dan' to sacrifice and purify the land. Now-a-days most Chiefs do not do so. Before you Europeans came, we Chiefs recognized the Ten'dan'. The reason others do not do so now is, that since Europeans came, many new Chiefs have been made, who know nothing about Chieftainship and only want to look after their own bellies. I myself have continued the old things. After the sowing we collect things and give to him (the Ten'dan') to sacrifice. I have not, like most Chiefs, taken away the dawa dawa trees from the Ten'dan'; when I am in need of some, I buy what I require. Formerly Chiefs ate out of calabashes, now they try to eat out of a basket.'

624 Heads of sections, of whom there are four at Nangoot (in charge of the sections known as Zoo'bis, Beam-bis, Isaka bis, and Kpea-bis),[1] report to the Kambon-naba, who in turn report to the Chief.

622 The Chief of Nangode, with whom I was very much impressed, informed me that he had continued the old system of Native Administration, although 'few other Chiefs now do so, which causes the spirits in the groves to lament'.

793 [421] [783] The Ten'dan': The following was told me by the Ten'dan' of Nangode (see Fig. 80): 'My ancestor owned the land. I was head Ten'dan' (Ten'dan' kpwem). The Europeans have given power to the Chiefs, who now own the land. My ancestors owned dawa dawa trees, and lost beasts, and when men shot arrows and killed any one, a cow was given to purify the land. When some one wanted to build a new house,

Kusase

XXXIX

THE KUSASE

Tribal and Clan Organization. The Tenedan'

THE Kusase are a large tribe, numbering over 40,000, which inhabits the extreme north-eastern corner of the Northern Territories. They also extend across the border into the mandated territory of Togoland. The people call themselves Kusase, singular Kusa, and their language Kusal.[1] Specimens of this dialect have been given in previous chapters. They do not apply the name Gurense to themselves as do the Nankanse.

Clans: The word used in the vernacular is budi. A son acquires the clan of his father. Here, for the first time, we encounter a departure from the more common practice of using the totem name to designate the clan. A Kusa, if asked his clan, will give the name, not of its totem, but of the male ancestor from whom all his fellow-clansmen trace descent. On inquiring further, he will then state what is his clan taboo. This departure from the usual practice will also be noted later on among the Lobi. Here again, we find particular clans grouped in certain towns, town again having the meaning of 'area' or 'settlement' rather than township in the commonly accepted sense. The following table illustrates the above.

Town.	Clan.	Clan Taboo.
Gagbir.[2]	Zuos.	Waf tetar (lit. big snake i.e. python).
Garu.	Nabt.	Sur. (The heart of any animal).
Kugri.	Nabt.	Sur. (The heart of any animal).
Timpale.	Nabt.	Tunig (a kind of fish with sharp teeth).
Pusig.	Zuos.	Python.

The towns of Bindur, Bugur, Zabuk, Timpan, Bawk' also contain a number of Zuos clansmen. Bawk (Bawku)[3] are really Mampruse, not

[1] Kusal is so much like Mole that an officer learned the former language by mistake for the latter and was duly examined by a language board and passed, much to the amusement of critics of the said board. They had, however, every excuse for doing so, the laugh really being against those who, because these languages had different names, thought they were not related. Curiously enough, however, Kusase and Moshi do not intermarry (see p. 390).

[2] Anglice Kagbiri.

[3] The Tenedan' is, however, a Zuos.
